

LAKE COUNTY G. O. P. SCORES VICTORY AT POLLS

Les. Tiffany Is Center of Attack in Hot Campaign

PETTY LEADS IN G. O. P. VOTE

While Illinois at large was electing almost the entire Democratic state ticket Tuesday, Lake county remained true to traditions, returning the full Republican county slate of candidates as victors in one of the heaviest off-year ballottings in history of the Republican party in Lake county.

Petty Leads Ticket

Antioch's candidate, W. C. Petty, for county superintendent of schools, leads the Republican ticket by piling up the greatest majority over his Democratic opponent, Mrs. Frances C. Moody. With six of the precincts still out late yesterday, Petty's total was 15,277 as against 6,582 for Mrs. Moody, a lead for the local man of 8,695 votes. Even the earliest returns Tuesday night indicated the election of the Antioch school principal.

Tiffany Center of Attack

Concentration of the Democratic vote in an effort to put Herbert E. Yager, in the sheriff's office resulted in one of the hottest races ever seen in Lake county. Lester Tiffany, chief of police of Lake Forest and the G. O. P. choice, won the fight with 2,714 votes to the good, according to complete unofficial returns yesterday.

Zion City gave Tiffany 1800 votes to 623 for Yager, and this count together with the great vote Tiffany received in his home township of Sheldale, piled up the 2,700 majority for the police chief.

G. O. P. 2 to 1

Other returns shows Judge Perry L. Persons a winner over his Democratic adversary, Joseph Jadrlich, by 8,000 majority.

County Clerk Law Hendee defeated Joseph P. Daly, 14,629 to 7,973, according to slightly incomplete returns.

Martin C. Decker, unopposed for reelection as probate judge, received 14,783; and John R. Bullock, sole candidate for probate clerk, got a vote totaling nearly 15,000.

Jay B. Morse, treasurer, sailed to victory by a majority of nearly 8,000 over his Democratic opponent, Peter J. Duffy.

The Democratic landslide cut the usual G. O. P. majorities as they never had been cut before, but the two to one majorities recorded in most cases indicate that Lake county is still one of the state's G. O. P. strongholds.

Dady to Circuit Bench

There was no opposition to Ralph J. Dady, Republican candidate for circuit judge in the 17th judicial district. Dady was the choice of Republicans to succeed for Judge Chas. C. Edwards, who resigned.

James Is Delegate at Safety Conference

J. C. James was the only Lake county delegate present at the meeting of representatives of the Illinois Conference on Street and Highway Safety held last night at the Hamilton Club, Chicago. The meeting was called by Chairman Dr. John Dill Robertson, director of safety for the Motorists Association of Illinois, for the purpose of completing arrangements for the state wide convention to be held in Springfield Nov. 24 and 25, when it is expected that a drivers' license law is expected to be drafted and recommended for passage by the next general assembly.

WILL STAGE VICTORY PARTY FOR PETTY

Supporters of W. C. Petty, Antioch candidate for County Superintendent of schools, slated over the fact that his vote of 15,833 is the G. O. P. high mark in Lake County, are planning a celebration party to be held Monday evening, Nov. 10, at the High school gymnasium.

Lake county voters are all invited to be present to share in Antioch's celebration of Mr. Petty's overwhelming victory, by joining the dancers, or the card-players, listening to the speeches and participating of the lunch.

WINS IN HARD FIGHT

Selected as the object of the Democratic attack, Lester T. Tiffany, Republican candidate for sheriff of Lake county, had one of the hardest fights of the campaign, but won out over Herb Yager by nearly 3000 votes.

MCDONOUGH LOSES IN CLOSE RACE FOR REPRESENTATIVE

McHenry County Elects
Two to Lower House—
Democrat Wins

Concentration by McHenry and Boone county Republicans on one man and the plumping of three votes by 8th district Democrats resulted in the defeat Tuesday of Leo McDonough, able representative from Lake County and the election of two candidates from McHenry county, William M. Carroll, of Woodstock, Republican, and Thos. Bolger, McHenry, Democrat.

Lake county political leaders blame representatives from the eighth district in the State Assembly, will now have but one while McHenry county, which had none, will be represented by two men, replacing Republican Jackson of Boone county, who was defeated this spring in the primary.

Lake county political leaders blame this county's loss of one of its representatives to the uncalled for generosity on the part of Lake county voters who gave the McHenry candidates a good vote while McHenry was plugging three straight for either Carroll or Bolger, or giving them each one and one-half, ignoring the Lake county candidates altogether.

Warns Election Officials

On the day of election Bolger sent notices to all judges and clerks of elections in the district advising them of the law in counting the ballots and threatening a grand jury investigation in the event he did not receive justice.

Two years ago Bolger was defeated by a small margin by Rep. Lyons, and in the recount he demanded. The election of Bolger places a Democrat in the general assembly for the first time in ten years, as Thomas Graham of Long Lake was the last of the Jeffersonians to defeat one of the title of G. O. P. candidates.

With only a few precincts missing from the county, Carroll is indicated as high man in the district.

Returns by Counties

The returns by counties, with three precincts missing in Lake and one in Boone were as follows:

| | Lake | McHenry | Boone | Totals |
|-----------|--------|---------|-------|--------|
| Lyons | 24,137 | 4,668 | 1,841 | 30,646 |
| McDonough | 23,360 | 2,364 | 1,131 | 26,855 |
| Carroll | 10,029 | 17,283 | 3,929 | 31,241 |
| Bolger | 19,300 | 3,591 | 1,192 | 29,083 |

TAX AMENDMENT LOSES; OTHER MEASURES WIN

Voters Are Shy of Tax
"Relief;" Fourth Defeat of Tax Idea

For the fourth time in recent years, Illinois tax payers Tuesday defeated decisively the amendment to the state constitution authorizing the general assembly to enact new revenue laws. The returns at hand indicate that the measure has been defeated by a total of 146,000.

Even if it had obtained that majority in its favor it still would have lost, because an amendment to the state constitution requires a majority of all the votes cast. For United States senator the returns indicate that 1,998,000 votes were cast. To have won the amendment needed more than half of that vote. The total vote cast for and against the amendment is indicated by the average number in the precincts reported to have been less than 1,100,000.

Fourth Defeat for Tax Change

This is the fourth time that an amendment to the revenue article of the constitution has gone before the voters in some form or other. Each one has been defeated.

The form of the amendment submitted Tuesday was criticized because it gave large powers to the legislature to deal with tax matters. It permitted the adoption of a state income tax, but did not require the legislature to reduce the taxes on real estate and personal property accordingly. Therefore the charge was made repeatedly that the amendment would only add another tax to the burdens of the property owners.

Lake County Is Wet

A nearly 3 to 1 vote on the repeal of the Volstead act, and about the same vote ratio on modification of the state prohibition law in the balloting here Tuesday left no doubt as to the wishes of Lake county voters regarding the issue.

The state wide referendum shows the wet cause to have won decisively. Report of 4,830 Illinois precincts early today shows that 771,682 voted for the repeal of the 18th amendment as against 306,464 who voted no. The modification proposition carried 737,373 to 207,882, and the repeal of the Illinois prohibition act won, 782,862 to 294,229.

Women on Juries

The proposal to permit women to serve as jurors in this state received an affirmative vote 521,770 voting for the measure and 397,302 against it.

Banking Law Okayed

The proposed change in the Illinois law which will lighten up banking regulations, won by a big majority throughout the state, and in Lake county it received an affirmative vote of about four to three.

Bond Issue Approved

A 5 to 3 vote in favor of the $14,000,000 bond issue for the preservation of wild game and fish and forest preserves and recreation grounds carried throughout the state by a 5 to 3 ratio, more complete returns early today indicated. The measure was favored in Lake county by a vote of 8,000 to 6,000, incomplete returns showed.

Burlington Physician Opens Office Here

Dr. Geo. W. Newell, of the Newell Clinic, Burlington, Wis., has announced the opening of an office in Antioch over King's Drug Store. Office hours will be from 11:00 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. The telephone number is Antioch 31.

Second Meeting of P. T. A. Held Monday Evening

The second meeting of the P. T. A. was held Monday evening at the grade school. The members have been invited to attend the November meeting of the Woman's Club at the home of Mrs. John Brogan, when the subject under discussion will be "Child Welfare."

S. E. Pollock spoke, briefly, urging everyone to support the local candidate for Superintendent of Schools. The first and second grades were tied in their attendance percentage, so a three dollar prize was given to each grade.

Brother of Sheriff- Elect to Become Lake Forest Police Chief

Frank Tiffany, new police chief of North Chicago, on December 1, will become chief of police of Lake Forest, succeeding his brother, Lester, who on Tuesday was elected sheriff of Lake county. The appointment of Frank Tiffany was confirmed by a unanimous vote of Lake Forest village council last Monday night, but announcement was withheld pending the outcome of the election.

FOUR PAGE COMIC SECTION TO BE FEATURE OF NEWS

Here's a treat for readers of the Antioch News.

Beginning next week, a four-page colored comic section featuring the nationally famous "Slim-Jim" and three other leading comic pages will appear as a regular feature of this newspaper.

These comic pages, which are being used by many of the leading metropolitan newspapers of the country, will appear exclusively in the Antioch News in this territory. Each page will be printed in four colors, one more color than many metropolitan newspapers use in their comic sections.

Caro has been taken in selecting the cartoons to appear in this section so that they will not conflict with any of the comic sections of the big dailies coming into this territory. This gives readers another high-class comic section.

It was not until a few years ago that colored comics were within the reach of the smaller papers and their introduction into this field marks a distinct advance of the rural press. Formerly, the smaller papers were content to give their readers the local news happenings only and considered "features" something for the big-city brothers. Today, however, even the smaller publishers realize that their readers want more than just the reports of local news happenings.

PLAN TO ORGANIZE MOOSE LODGE HERE

Plans to organize a Loyal Order of Moose lodge in Antioch were launched Monday night when fifty local men met in the Naber building where they were addressed by Earl C. Hasoy, deputy supreme dictator of the lodge. Many declared themselves in favor of the organization of a lodge here, and a campaign for charter members is to start at once under the direction of Earl St. John, deputy supervisor.

An order of this kind, together with a club room for members, has long been needed in Antioch, promoters of the new lodge say, and the project seems destined to succeed, as many have already signed to become members, it was announced today.

S. M. Walance and Dr. F. S. Morrell returned Friday from a ten days' vacation at Chetek, Wis.

LAKE COUNTY'S REPRESENTATIVE

Representative Richard J. Lyons, Mundelein, re-elected Tuesday, will be Lake county's only representative at Springfield for the next two years. In a four-way battle, Lee McDonough lost when Thomas Bolger rode to victory on the Democratic landslide and the Lake county candidate was shaded in the vote-getting by William M. Carroll, McHenry county's Republican entry.

PETTY TOPS LAKE COUNTY VOTE

Wm. C. Petty, Antioch, candidate for county superintendent of schools, led the Republican ticket in Lake county, defeating Mrs. Frances Moody, his Democratic opponent, 15,833 to 6,754.

CASE OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS IS FOUND AT GRADE SCHOOL

Virginia Van Patten Is Victim of Malady—
Room III Closed

Room No. 3 at the Antioch Grade school was ordered closed today by Health Officer Dr. H. F. Beebe when it was announced that Virginia Van Patten, one of the scholars in the room, was suffering from infantile paralysis. Virginia is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Van Patten of 234 Park avenue.

Dr. Beebe has spent the day making a thorough examination of students at the grade school and also at the high school for the purpose of discovering any cases of illness. Late today he reported that no illness of a serious nature had been found.

The lone case has been isolated and placed under quarantine and other children of the family will be under observation for two weeks before being allowed to return to school. Dr. Beebe announced, Room three, at the grade school has been fumigated and school in that room will be resumed Monday. Children out of school now must secure a certificate from the health officer before returning to school.

Lake County Girls' 4-H Sewing Club Champions Chosen

On Tuesday, November 4th, Miss Martha Hensley, Assistant State Leader of Girls' Club Work, from the University of Illinois, met with a group of local leaders, under the leadership of Mrs. H. C. Glikerson.

At this meeting the County Clothing Champions were selected by Miss Hensley.

First year Clothing Club Champion is Grace Minto, Antioch, of the Oakland Progressive 4-H Club; second year champion, Allee Ellsbury, Gurnee, of the Happy Ralubow Workers Club; third year champion, Allee Russell, Round Lake, of Jolly Dozen 4-H Club; fourth year champion, Lola Metcalf, Gurnee, of Fair and Square 4-H Club.

Miss Hensley spoke of the record books of the girls as being in unusually fine condition. She also congratulated Lake County on putting over the largest piece of Girls' Sewing Club Work in Illinois under the leadership of a Farm Adviser. County girls' work all have Home Advisers. She attributed a large part of this success to the Assistant County Leaders, Mrs. H. C. Glikerson, who has carried on the eleven sewing clubs and had the hearty co-operation of thirty-four women as local and assistant local leaders.

Mr. and Mrs. Nason Sibley and family spent last Sunday, with Mr. and Mrs. Rex Bonser at Kankakee.

J. HAM. LEWIS BIG WINNER IN LANDSLIDE VOTE

Lake County True to
G. O. P. as Democrats
Sweep State

LEWIS' LEAD IS OVER 720,000

Illinois turned Democratic Tuesday. A landslide vote, said by political experts to be the result of economic distress and a growing resentment toward prohibition, swept James Hamilton Lewis into the United States senate and swamped his two opponents — Congresswoman Ruth Hanna McCormick and Mrs. Lottie O'Neill, the former the regular G. O. P. nominee and the latter the exponent of the Independent Dry Republican faction. Col. Lewis' lead approached 720,000 today as belated returns came in.

Other Democrats Win

Carried along with Senator Lewis on the wave of Democracy was Edward J. Barrett, for state treasurer and William H. Dietrich and Walter Nesbit for congressmen-at-large. Latest returns today indicated that Francis G. Blair for state superintendent of public instruction, is the only successful Republican candidate on the state ticket.

Chindblom Close Winner

Congressman Carl R. Chindblom, Republican incumbent from the Tenth District was leading his Democratic opponent, John E. Hesse by a narrow margin early Tuesday morning, with a few precincts untabulated.

Chindblom's Lake county friends were surprised at his small margin, which was accounted for partially by the labor strength of A. J. McLeod, campaign manager for Hesse. Chindblom also is known as an ardent dry.

Community Choral Society Organizing

Aims to Present "Messiah" with H. S. Chorus at Easter

A community choral society is now being enthusiastically organized as a result of plans formulated at a committee meeting held at the high school Monday evening. It was decided that it would be desirable to combine all the community vocal talent into one organization, so a list of 100 names was drawn up to form a basis for the chorus. This list is composed of community people who have shown interest or talent in vocal work. Letters will be sent to these people inviting them to be members of this chorus.

Plans at present are sponsored by S. E. Pollock, Miss Patricia Kennedy, Mrs. G. W. Jensen, Rev. J. C. Simms and L. O. Bright.

The organization plans to draw from the entire community and desires to include neighborhood communities as well—Lake Villa, Millburn, Fox Lake, Wilmet, Salem, Trevor and others. It is hoped that the residents of these surrounding towns will be interested in joining the organization. Some names may have been overlooked in arranging the list, but it is hoped that any of those who do not receive letters who wish to join the chorus will not be hesitant in attending the rehearsals. The first rehearsal will be held at 7:30 next Monday evening, Nov. 10, at the High school.

The choral society will be under the direction of Edmund Jeffers, director of music at the High school. Mr. Jeffers directed three choirs at Bloomington, Ill., while studying at Illinois Wesleyan. During his study there he participated in presentations of the Messiah both in the orchestra and chorus for four years, when the Philharmonic society gave its annual performance.

One of the outstanding aims in view at the time of organizing the society is to present the oratorio, Handel's "Messiah" in combination with the high school chorus of sixty voices near Easter of next spring.

DODGING THE REAL ISSUE

A well-known economist recently advanced the interesting argument that the present-day political campaign against the electric industry has grown out of the fact that public officials are looking for a way to dodge the liquor question.

Prohibition is a passionate issue, that arouses strong emotion in "wets" and "drys" alike. It is not, from the political standpoint, "safe." Only in those few states which are irrevocably "wet" or "dry" can it be argued without damaging the political future of the campaigners.

Thus the office-holders and the office-seekers turned to power as the next best available issue. Power, unlike prohibition, does not arouse personal feeling in the great mass of voters. It is a pleasantly abstract subject and one which can be misconstrued to the politicians' hearts' content.

In the face of all the known facts they have attempted to make a skeptical public to whom electricity is an almost infinitesimal part of the family budget believe that the nation is menaced by a great power trust. If they have failed it is because they have been trying to do the impossible. The material for an "issue" in the political sense, just isn't there. Power has no place in politics.

It is safe to say that of all modern governmental problems, none people are interested in prohibition, from one standpoint or another, than any other issue. It is amusing to see our "saviours of the people" run to cover when a real issue, which must eventually be solved, appears on the horizon.

WHY THE DRIVERS' LAW?

Why is a drivers' license law necessary? Well, why is a license to practice medicine necessary, or a license to practice law? Answer the second question and you have the answer to the first.

Experience with the drivers' license law in some twelve states proves conclusively that it is essential to the protection of our citizens. It is first of all a safety measure designed to prevent accidental mishap to the general public and to the driver himself.

There is no reason in the world why anyone who is mentally or physically unfit to drive an automobile should be permitted to do so. Yet in thirty-one states of the union there are no license requirements whatever. The operator may be and often is mentally unfit or physically incapacitated. He may be one who makes a common practice of driving his car in an intoxicated condition. Or he may be one of a very common type of "accident repeaters," yet there is no legal restraint whatever upon his rights to drive. That is, there is no restraint that can be placed upon him until after a serious accident proves his incapacity, and even then only after long court delays. Little wonder that the motor vehicle accident death rate continues to run much higher than the rates of fatalities in any other field of accident mishaps.

The license law with examination requirements as recommended by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety goes far in weeding out incompetent drivers. It is simply a case of locking the barn before the horse is stolen, rather than lamenting the theft afterwards. The law heads off the accident by removing the cause before the eventually takes place. In short, a standard drivers' license law takes away from the highway one of the most important contributing factors in motor vehicle tragedies—the driver who is not competent to handle an automobile and therefore is a menace to the safety of himself and others.

The standard law provides that the license may be suspended in certain cases of violation and that it must be revoked in certain other cases. For instance, when one is convicted of driving in an intoxicated condition; or when one is convicted of reckless driving three times during a year; or when one involved in an accident is convicted of failing to stop and to properly identify himself, the obligation to revoke the license is mandatory.

On the other hand, the department may suspend the license if it has good reason to believe that anyone of the above mentioned offenses has been committed. There are other causes of revocation and suspension. These few illustrations show that the model law has teeth that make it effective in getting a lot of incompetents out of the driver's seat and keeping them out.

There is no doubt about the successful functioning of the drivers' license law in states where the examination is a requirement. Nine such states, California, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Vermont, and Arizona all have drivers' license laws adopted since 1916. Up to December 31, 1929, there were 29 per cent fewer fatalities since the adoption of the law in these states than there would have been if these states had experienced the same increase as the non-license states.

New Hampshire, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia, all of which had the law prior to 1916 have also enjoyed a similar downward trend, although no definite basis of comparison is available because of the lack of definite data. Five other states have what are known as "sub-standard" drivers' license laws which lack certain essentials such as the examination requirement or other important features.

This remarkable record amounts to an actual saving of some 22,000 lives according to officials of the National Safety Council who have recently conducted an exhaustive survey of our national drivers' license law experience.

It is a significant fact that efforts are being made this fall in twenty-eight states to secure the adoption of a drivers' license law. These include some of the "sub-standard" states where efforts will be made to strengthen existing laws. Oregon, for instance, has the law without the examination provision and a campaign will be made in that state to add the very necessary examination clause. The states in which campaigns will be conducted this fall and in early spring, are as follows: Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Washington, Wyoming, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Florida, and Georgia.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I—Renewing a childhood attachment, Ernestine Briceland, of a wealthy Chicago family, is tremendously attracted by Will Todd, youthful newspaper artist, son of a not particularly well-to-do carpenter. Her sister Lillian, more of the conventional type, and aware of the attitude of their father toward his daughter's marriage to an impetuous youth, urges Ernestine to be careful, but the latter, capable of a passionate attachment, and realizing that in Will Todd she has found her affinity, refuses.

CHAPTER II—The love-making progresses swiftly, and finally, largely because of Ernestine's urging, they make a "runaway" marriage. Briceland is infuriated but helpless, Ernestine being of age, and after a stormy scene the girl, with her husband, leaves her parents' home. Lillian, Hamilton, wealthy young lawyer, long Lillian's suitor, wins her consent to his wife.

CHAPTER III—The bride night is spent at Will's home, and next day they begin their married life in a single room in a humble neighborhood. Ernestine realizes the difference between her father's attitude toward her, but, secure in her love, faces the future bravely.

CHAPTER IV—John Poole, Will's best friend, successful though disreputable artist, gives a birthday party for Ernestine at Holly Packer's, her hemlock resort on the fringe of the underworld. Poole, notorious as a bootlegger and gang leader, irritates Ernestine by his criticism of Will for bringing his young wife to such a place. Appealing to Will to leave home, he delegates the task to a friend, Tommy Tucker, explaining that he must see Poole, who has drunk too much to his home. Ernestine is hurt and indignant. The situation is saved by the appearance of Lillian and Lillian, who had heard of her, and about and with whom she leaves the party.

"You are so hard," she wept, "so hard with me."
He bent and kissed her and pressed his face to hers. "It's life," he said. "We have to grow up. Life is hard."
Ernestine awakened next morning to find that the pain and confusion of the night before had vanished into a new and not unhappy perspective on her life.

For the first time she could see what a blow it had been to mamma and papa to have her living in Erie street, with no margin, no possessions, no possibility of restraint or economy. How difficult it was—perhaps for their sakes she ought to co-operate with mamma and papa to do something for them. Enough money for a decent flat—a small comfortable house—it would be so much easier for mamma.

But Ernestine felt again the cold wind on her cheeks, remembered vividly how she had wept, and how she had said, again and again, "I promise, Will—I promise." He had asked her for no such statement. She had done the bargaining. Whatever it cost—to her family or to herself—she would keep that promise to Will, and live on what he brought her until he himself told her to do otherwise.

Ernestine began to wonder if she would be as good a wife and mother as Elaine Briceland, when the time came that Will had made good.
She paused to consider this thought and smiled happily, for now she saw that for the first time she was entirely confident of Will's success. It had been as much laughing as conviction before, but now she was sure. How hard he was! His hardness brought only admiration, this morning, the practical respect of a practical person. "If you want to go back, you've only to put on your hat and do it!" She wondered how many men had the courage to take a stand like that.

She did not regret the quarrel at all. Her marriage had attained a new reality. She knew that she was not simply having a good time. She knew that she could not go home when the party was over. They had advanced from the honeymoon period into permanence.

In what way, here and now, could she make this new feeling practical, make it effective?

How would they meet the obligation of children? Would she go home to mamma or to some hospital? They would have to plan without mamma, if they were to be consistent. She understood that babies were frightfully expensive. She had read articles in magazines about them. Yet thousands of women with no more money than she possessed had babies. She would have to find out how they managed.

She would have to see a doctor, ask questions, answer them. She would have to find out the rates at different hospitals, under different conditions. And after she had investigated the matter and decided on her own plan, she would have to begin to save a definite amount every week, out of Will's pay, so that they might meet the emergency. That would be fun—to have money in her hand, when her time came!

She decided to say nothing to Will about this, until she knew. Like her mother, she must exercise her virtue privately and let results speak for her. She had a few dollars with which to open a savings account, there was a bank nearby, a branch of downtown bank. She would get a meant coin chest for herself and Will. Her mental hellily now became physical, and she rose and dressed, kissed Will lightly on the cheek, and left a note on the dresser for him, lest he think she had taken his advice and gone home. Downstairs she found a box full of roses for her, and a card in it with a few words written in an erect elaborate script.

"To beg forgiveness for my rudeness, and to express the hope that we may be real friends some day.—L. S. Pastore."

Ernestine gave the roses to Mrs. Bennett without comment and went out.
Last April she had been a school-girl. Now she was filled with the solemn importance of wifehood and motherhood. The sweet air filled her with happiness. Her husband's face fled before her mind's eye, down the long curve of boulevard, an indignant countenance, fiery, strong. Her heart contracted within her at the thought of him and his love.

The visit to the doctor's was prolonged, but she reached mamma's house in time for lunch, and found the two women so full of Lillian's plans that she kept her own secret.

Determined to make the day complete she left early and set out for the long tiresome street car ride to the Northwest side. She was ashamed to realize how few were the visits she and Will had made to the little house where his mother and father lived. She was at her mother's home two or three times a week, but they had not been to see Will's mother half a dozen times in the months of their marriage. It was not intentional neglect, but it always seemed to work out that way, and Will had been as lax as she about spending his one day a week on that long journey.

CHAPTER VI

Ernestine Asks a Favor

When Ernestine reached her mother-in-law's house, she was astonished to find a crowd of people standing about the door, and to see a taxi just driving away, and another car at the curb. When she came into the group, every one fell silent, and Ernestine looked at the faces with curiosity and a sense of fear.

"What's the matter?" she said nervously to a big housewife who opened the door for her.

"Will's been trying to find you—they just brought his pa home. He's dead—dropped dead at his work today, and his ma's real bad. I got Will on the telephone, at the paper, and he came right out here, but he didn't know where you was."

Ernestine stood staring at her, and her hand went up to her heart in a frightened gesture.

"Where's Will?" she asked wildly.

"He's in with his ma. Go still—the doctor's working with her. She's been awful bad the last few days. I've been with her all the time."

"But she didn't tell us."

"She thought she'd be better—she's been sick so long."

Will looked up as she came in and called her name softly. She went straight to him and put her arms around him. His face was wet with tears—he was not the positive, fiery creature with whom she had quarreled so bitterly the night before, but a little boy, lost and confused. She kissed him quickly, several times, and he said to her:

"I'm glad you got here—Mrs. Bennett didn't know where you were. Oh, Ernestine—mum's so sick—the doctor doesn't know whether she'll ever be better—and dad gone like that—just like a breath. I haven't seen him for three weeks."

"Darling—he'd want to go—quickly," said Ernestine, feeling the fullness of words—the emptiness of comfort. It wasn't her father, her conscience told her. She and Will had been neglectful.

The doctor came out of the bedroom and asked Ernestine crisply to get him some hot water. Ernestine took off her fur coat and her little red hat and went into the kitchen. There was a fire in the small range, and awkwardly she put some coal upon it and set the teakettle on to heat. The doctor asked her for towels. She waited on him as well as she could and accepted in silence his sharp reprimand when she was clumsy.

The neighbors had dissolved. Mrs. Schluss, who lived next door, came in and made a little supper. She put it on the kitchen table and said to Ernestine:

"See if you can get Will to eat—he's in there crying."

"I will," said Ernestine, and Mrs. Schluss went on.

"You'll have to stay here, now, I guess. Will's ma shouldn't have been left alone, and now, his pa's dead, there's nobody to look out for her but you and Will."

"Of course I'll come," said Ernestine. "I'd have come before, if I had known that I was needed. We didn't want to be a burden—"

She found this phrase in her mind as she coaxed Will to eat a little supper. Had their motives been entirely unselfish, in going to Erie street? Hadn't they wanted to be alone—away from his people? Should she have stayed with Will's mother, and nursed her, and done the work? There was no question but that Mrs. Schluss, and probably other neighbors as well, thought that she should. Her heart ached with remorse.

Will stayed in the kitchen with her, and Ernestine washed the dishes and put them all away, going to him at times and patting or cursing him. The undertaker came, the doctor left and returned about nine o'clock. He called Will into the other room, but after a time Will came back into the kitchen, where Ernestine sat, not knowing what to do.

"Ernestine," Will looked at her uncertainly; his eyes appeared small and red with weeping, his nose seemed unusually big in his pale face, and his mouth was like a child's. "The doctor thinks we ought not have the funeral here—because of mother being so ill. The noise, and people coming in and out—he thinks she is ill enough that it might go against her. Do you—do you think your mother—I don't want him buried in a chapel—and he didn't belong to any church. He was an officer in an ethical society—they'll have the services—I don't know what to plan—"

The back door opened and Mrs. Schluss came in while he was talking, and with her another neighbor—Ernestine remembered having met him once before. His name was John Pryor, and he was a printer. Ernestine understood the entreaty in Will's eyes—but her heart sank. Mamma did not like funerals, and least of all would she like this one.

"I'll ask," she said uncertainly, and went to the telephone which was hung on the kitchen wall. It seemed an eternity before Ernestine heard her mother's voice. Flatteringly, she told her what had happened—wondering why she had not called her sooner.

"But, darling," cried mamma, "to think of you in all that trouble—I'll send the car right after you. You must come home to mamma until this is all over—you've never been to a funeral in your life, Ernestine. It will be so hard for you."

"Mamma," said Ernestine with vexation, "you know I can't come—I'm needed here. It's something else I called you for. Mamma, they can't have the funeral here at the house, because Will's mother is so ill it would be dangerous for her, and, of course, Will doesn't want his father buried from the funeral parlors, and he doesn't belong to any church—we don't know just what to do, mamma—"

"It's too bad you and Will aren't keeping house," said mamma. "If you had let papa help you you could do this for Will, now."

"You don't want to, mamma? I thought perhaps—your house is so big—that you would do this for Will. I'm asking you to have Will's father's funeral at our—at your house, mamma—"

All their eyes were on her—her face was scarlet, her eyes were suffused with tears of humiliation.

"Why, Ernestine," said mamma, in a troubled voice, "I don't know. I'll have to talk to daddy—grandmother's not well. Wait a minute—hold the wire."

Ernestine stood in silence, saying to Will with her lips, "She's asking papa," waiting in the endless interval, certain of refusal—already hurt and resentful.

"Ernestine," mamma's voice was terribly sympathetic, "we're all just as sorry as we can be, but papa doesn't think Mr. Todd would want it. It doesn't seem practical, dear—the funeral home right there in his own neighborhood—lots of people are buried from such chapels every day, darling. Don't ask mamma to do such a hard thing—"

Ernestine hung up the receiver without a word and turned strained great eyes upon Will. John Pryor regarded her with a sympathetic smile. He was a socialist, or an anarchist, or something, Ernestine recalled.

"Will," he said with instant kindness, "let me have this funeral for you? It's right here, in the neighborhood, and it won't be a bit of trouble—your father and I belong to the same society—it would be all right with him, I know."

"All right," said Will dully, and turned to the undertaker: "Fix it that way—will you tend to the notices?"

"Will," Ernestine implored him, "it's not my fault—they don't understand—"

He patted her arm and tried to control his feelings.

"That's all right, kitten. I know you can't help it—it's just their way." His face worked, and suddenly he clenched his big hand. "My father—he was good enough to work for years, for half his lifetime—good enough for that—but not good enough for his dead body."

"Will—Will—don't—don't, darling—oh, you must not say such a thing—sweetheart."

"Let him cry," said Mrs. Schluss wisely, and Will cried upon Ernestine's shoulder—his tears wet her blouse, and she held him, feeling the great sob rack him, wondering dimly if she would mourn for her father that way.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Everlasting Punishment" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 2.

The Golden Text was, "He that covereth his sins shall not prosper; but whose confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy" (Proverbs 28:13).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger forever, because he delighteth in mercy. He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us; he will subdue our iniquities; and thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea" (Micah 7:18, 19).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "We acknowledge God's forgiveness of sin in the destruction of sin and the spiritual understanding that casts out evil as unreal. But the belief in sin is punished so long as 'the belief lasts' (p. 407).

Lest We Forget

"In Flanders fields the poppies grow,
Amidst the crosses, row on row."

ALTHOUGH a thousand weary miles of ocean lie between us and the graves of those who gave their lives in 1917 and 1918 . . . and although the years be long since their sacrifice was new . . . we have not forgotten. HintsRHYTHM SHOULD BE KEYNOTE IN CHILD'S ROUTINE

By MRS. RUBY RICHEY

Thoughts help so much in planning or doing difficult or monotonous tasks. What is your opinion as to what constitutes the happiest individual? One psychologist defined that person as "he who thinks the happiest thoughts."

Some mothers do not hold their children to a daily routine because it is too inconvenient for them, and because they think the children need a change. Change comes quickly enough for the older children, but the little tots, and infants should be kept to an established routine in feeding, bathing, sleeping, playing, or learning. If you think of this as being rhythmical the idea becomes more beautiful.

From the day of birth the child must be taught obedience, also, in adhering to this routine. If he does, it will build up faith in the parents and upon faith in parents depends obedience and confidence. Later the growing child will then follow his parents' guiding suggestions more readily, if he has been brought up in a quiet, serene and happy environment with daily routine, or rhythm.

If a parent neglects this early training in habits and obedience, and later attempts to force this obedience upon the child, the youngster will not develop judgment and will, but will fall into that fatal facility of following other people's judgment and wills, which tends to make him a member of a helpless mob of more sheep, instead of a wise, free, strong individual.

It seems that there are so many do's and don'ts in bringing up children, and the best way is to use common sense. But—caution—beware—lookout (for the cars) about exacting obedience in matters where it is unnecessary, as in a forced silence, or quietness. Children are naturally inquisitive and active. Answer their questions, and do not discourage experimentation, unless dangerous.

What? No
Whipped Cream!

When you're a dessert that demands a nice topping of whipped cream, and your ice-box is as empty as old lady Hubbard's pantry, try this simple substitute for "topping":

Fruit Fluff

½ cup corn syrup
2 egg whites
¼ cup orange or pineapple juice, grape or loganberry juice.
Beat the egg whites stiff and whip in the corn syrup and fruit juices. Serve at once. This is excellent instead of whipped cream.

A Two-Dollar Dinner for Six

Ham Patties with Green Pea and Caper Sauce 75¢
Fluffy Mashed Potatoes 10¢
Baking Powder Biscuits 11¢
Fried Eggplant 35¢
Orange Tapioca Cream 25¢
Apple and Celery Salad 25¢
Coffee with Cream 15¢

IN these days after the drought when the careful housewife has to keep a canny eye on her food expenses, it's interesting to know that a dinner like the above can be served to six people at a cost of approximately two dollars.

To make the main dish and sauce, proceed as follows:

Ham Patties: Mash the contents of two 7-ounce cans of ham loaf, with a fork, shape into twelve small balls and roll in one slightly beaten egg and then fine crumbs. Fry in deep fat at 350° until golden brown, and drain on brown paper.

Green Pea and Caper Sauce: Melt three tablespoons butter, add three tablespoons flour, and stir until smooth. Add the liquor from an 11-ounce can of peas and one and one-half cups milk, slowly, stirring and cooking until creamy and smooth. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add the peas and two tablespoons capers. Serve hot over the patties.

Orange Tapioca Cream: Cook four tablespoons minute tapioca in one and one-third cups boiling water in a double boiler for about fifteen minutes or until transparent. Add four tablespoons sugar and the contents of one 3-ounce can of orange juice, and cool. Fold in one-half cup whipped cream and chill thoroughly.

Hints For Homemakers

By Jane Rogers

WASHABLE summer curtains should be laundered and put away unrolled for the winter.

While the time has passed for preserving the summer fruits, there is still ample opportunity to cut winter food bills by putting up the late products of the garden. Remember, too, that delicious jams and marmalades whose sugar content will provide needed warmth and energy during the winter months, can be prepared all winter long with the dried fruits such as prunes and apricots.

The ideal way to wash is to cold soak your clothes for five minutes, rub them for fifteen minutes in warm suds, rinse them three times in clear water and once in boiling. The first clear water rinse should be warm.

When ironing, hang on hangers dresses and shirts and they will keep their shape. Linens will wear longer if you do not iron the creases in and if you fold them in different creases each time.

TOPPY'S TRAVELS

Synopsis: Topsy leaves his home to follow his canary, Liany, who flies away. He captures the son of an enemy of his queen, who had been imprisoned. The mother is frantic, and Topsy's queen promises to have a meeting to decide the boy's fate. She sends a messenger to the enemy for a key to a locked door and tells Topsy that a pool lies behind the door, from which she had always learned of the plans of her enemies, until she went away, and upon returning, found the country held by Pillows. Continue—

After a long time, the Little Pillow returned.

"Have you the key?" the Queen demanded.

"The great Queen said to tell you that she will discuss that matter at your meeting tomorrow."

When the Pillow had hurriedly run away, the Queen said to Topsy, "We must force them to give us the key tomorrow, because even if they do promise to leave this land, they will only wait a little while after Egopli is returned to them before they invade our land again."

Topsy thought and thought, and then he asked, "Do you know where the key is? I am much stronger than the Pillows. Maybe I can find it."

The Cloud-Queen had been talking all this time with her jewel, so Egopli had only heard what Topsy had been saying. He now sat up and commanded, "Give me something to eat."

"Spoiled child," murmured the Queen, "he has no manners whatever."

Egopli repeated, "I want something to eat. I'm hungry. Give me something to eat."

"The Queen had an idea. 'He is a fat little boy,' she remarked. 'It won't hurt him to miss a meal or two. Maybe they'll give us the key, then.'"

Egopli began to cry, and scream for his mother. "Mother, they won't give me anything to eat."

"Stop that screaming!" the Cloud-Queen ordered.

But the spoiled boy only cried and shouted louder.

One of the Pillows ran to find the Pillow-Queen and report this to her, and presently she came running down the hall to her son. Topsy raised his sword and she stopped.

"Oh, what are you doing to him?" she cried.

The Cloud-Queen answered calmly. "We have not harmed your boy. He is merely angry because he can not have his own way."

"But you are starving my child."

"It is not necessary for my people to eat often," the Cloud-Queen said,

"so when you imprisoned my maidens and me without food, it did not hurt us. But with General Topsy it is different. He must have food. You did you feed him? Did you?"

The Pillow-Queen looked at Topsy and at his sword, and shuddered.

"Isn't there anything I can do?" she said in despair. "If we leave the country, won't you return my boy?"

"You know what I want," the Cloud-Queen said sternly. "Return my key, leave the land, and you shall have your child."

"I would, but my chief advisor won't let me."

The Cloud-Queen thought, "Your chief advisor is much shrewder than you are," but said nothing aloud, except "Then we will meet tomorrow as arranged. Good-night. Come General Topsy, bring Egopli."

Topsy was very tired, but he was not to enjoy any sleep that night, for the Cloud-Queen said, "They will try to steal Egopli tonight. You must guard him."

Topsy tried to keep from yawning. He was so sleepy. The Cloud-Queen laughed. "Poor General Topsy. Perhaps we shall all rest tomorrow night."

So they sat down for the vigil of the night.

ANNUAL ANTIOCH-LIBERTYVILLE FOOTBALL GAME TUES.

Last Game for Majority of Football Squad; Nine Are Seniors

The wind-up football game of the season will be played at Antioch when the Libertyville squad and their fans went their way to the ball field next Tuesday, November 11. This game is an annual event, and always occurs on November 11 after both teams have earned their season's scars.

Libertyville is not invulnerable. Warren met and defeated them last week when both unvanquished teams played the deciding championship game at Libertyville. It may so come to pass that Antioch will find that weak spot, also, and lay the enemy low.

Although Antioch is frequently the winner in basketball, Libertyville has usually outplayed the local boys on the football field. In 1926, when the Libertyville boys made the little jump up here, they went home a little better acquainted with Antioch football tactics. And what a jubilee the old town beheld and heard then, when the high school masses staged parades and a cheering fest. History repeats itself — who knows?

After a hard fought game with the squad of their former coach, Antioch was defeated at Leyden Friday, 26-0.

All Seniors to Receive Letters This is the last year of high school football for nine of the boys, all of whom will probably receive first-team letters. Tony Fuchs, Frank Turk, Robert Hughes, Charles Florio, Frank Hahn, Charles Holmes, Norbert Paefni, Widmer Smith and Ward Edwards are those who graduated next spring.

Junior boys who were outstanding in football this season are John Bregan, Robert King, Russell McDonnell, and Arthur Jenrich; sophomores, Koulman and Munsell; freshmen, the Snyder boys and C. Abel. Others who played this fall are Howard Straeg, and Emil Kuba, juniors; Clayton Bartlett and Russell Hunter, freshmen.

Basketball practice began this week, with over sixty candidates for positions. Before swinging into the

High School Straw Vote Piles Up for Ham. Lewis

Balloting Runs Generally G. O. P.; Referendums Contrary

The results of the straw balloting at the High school Tuesday morning generally foretold the outcome of the election. James Hamilton Lewis was acceded victor by a small majority of six votes, the count running 83 to 77. Lottie H. O'Neill received eleven votes.

In the Representative race, Lyons was given 144 votes, McDonough 167, Carroll 72 and Holger 128. McDonough's victory here was not repeated at the real election. Lester Tiffany was given decided advantage over Yager, polling 117 to 50. W. C. Petty naturally was elected the new County Superintendent of Schools. The school vote reflected Lake County's Republican vote for other candidates.

Referendum Results On the question of state wide system of conservation and forest preserves and public recreation grounds, the vote was nearly unanimously in favor of the measure. The tax relief amendment won by a small margin and the repeal of the eighteenth amendment was carried by fifteen votes. On the question of Women Jurists, the vote showed an opposition of 75 with 56 favoring the measure.

strenuous winter practice schedule, a series of intra-mural games among the various organizations are being held. The Commercial club girls were victorious in the game with the Freshman girls last night, and the Senior boys defeated the Sophomore boys. Games this afternoon are between the Glee Club Girls and the Junior girls, and the Junior boys and Freshman boys.

Beginning Tuesday, I will have a very fine line of used furniture, stoves, musical instruments, rugs, and other articles.

If you have any article of household furnishings, just let me know, so, if I have a call for it, I can sell it for you.

I want a good 16 or 18-inch coal heating stove, 2 kitchen ranges — right now.

If you have anything you want to dispose of — just call me at 46 Antioch

"I'm marrying for MONEY... not for love"

—but on her wedding day...

FROM childhood she had been brought up for the marriage market. All her actions had been planned — to please men. Love had been forced out of her life.

And now it was her wedding day. She thought of Bob, so soon to be her husband. "I have managed well," she mused. She had loved Allan, of course. But Allan was poor... while Bob could give her everything...

The door opened suddenly and her father stood before her. She saw at once that something had happened. "What is wrong?" she cried.

Without a word he handed her a letter, and as she read it her cheeks paled. For a thing like this to happen — at the very hour of her wedding!

Just Around the Corner---Winter

We feel it's only our duty, as automotive maintenance men, to remind you that Winter, with its snow and ice, is just "around the corner."

Your car, as you know, needs special attention now. The cooling system should be made leak-proof, anti-freeze installed, the oil changed, the battery fully charged, and the engine tuned up.

We're prepared to do all these things, at reasonable cost. Now is a good time to see us.
